No part of this Guide may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system or transmitted in any form or by any means without prior permission in writing from the publisher.
It is my pleasure to welcome you to the first Coast edition of the Ecotourism Kenya Member’s Guide, which comes at an opportune time as Ecotourism Kenya sets about to launch its Coast regional office at Diani, Ukunda in April 2012.

The new Tourism Act focuses on diversification of tourism products within all regions in Kenya. Therefore, the Guide is a brief showcase of EK members at the coast and their diverse products. This Guide will provide useful information about the key attractions in the Kenyan coast tourism circuit. It strives to direct individuals and groups interested to visit and invest in the preservation of the pristine beaches, premium hotels business, and vibrant partnerships with community tourism enterprises, and also in discovering the diverse marine life that the Kenyan coast has to offer.

It is my great pleasure to welcome you to Ecotourism Kenya, as ask for your indulgence in our program activities at the Kenya Coast. We value your input and interest in promoting the Kenyan coast as a premium ecotourism destination. Please let us know how best to serve your interests in responsible and sustainable tourism.

Karibuni nyote!

Andrew Muigai
Chairman, Ecotourism Kenya Executive Board
Welcome to the 2012 Ecotourism Kenya Coast Members Guide.

The Kenyan Coastline is globally popular with tourists because of its long, beautiful, and sunny beaches, exquisite marine life and the surrounding breathtaking wilderness adorned by unique wildlife, landscapes and sceneries. Visitors awe at the rich Swahili and Mijikenda cultures intertwined with historical artifacts dating back more than 10 centuries ago.

Since its formation, Ecotourism Kenya has worked closely with other tourism stakeholders to promote responsible and sustainable tourism practices in the coastal region. This includes assessing tourism accommodation facilities for compliance to ecotourism best practices. In addition, Ecotourism Kenya is keen to diversify the Kenyan tourism products through linking local community tourism enterprises with tour operators and tourism accommodation facilities.

This guide is a showcase of ecotourism efforts along the Kenya coastline. Also, it is an important source of overview information about the activities of Ecotourism Kenya members. Also it will serve as a reference point for stakeholders keen on promoting ecotourism, responsible and sustainable tourism in the country.

We have now established the Coast outreach Office to serve Ecotourism Kenya members better and to promote ecotourism best practice in the region while facilitating meaningful partnerships among stakeholders at the Coast. We hope this development will contribute significantly to improving the Kenyan tourism product.

Karibu Ecotourism Pwani!!!

Kahindi Lekalhaile
CEO, Ecotourism Kenya
The Coast tourism circuit is defined by the region along the Kenyan coastline that includes Mombasa, Diani, Lamu and Malindi areas, as well as Taita-Taveta County in the hinterland with 62% of its land occupied by the Tsavo National Parks. This edition of Ecotourism Kenya’s Coastal Guide consists of different categories of Ecotourism Kenya members located within the Coast tourism circuit. The categories are, namely: Eco-rated facilities, Accommodation facilities, Tour operators and destination management companies, Community-based tourism enterprises and, and Individuals.

Brief History And People

The Kenyan coast earned its place on the world map over 800 years ago, as a trading centre for merchants from India, the Eastern Mediterranean, Arabia and the Persian Gulf. These merchants came to the area courtesy of the Kaskazi and Kusi, the north east and south east trade winds, respectively. Their items of trade included gold, animal skins and horns, fruits, spices, and slaves. Over time these merchants settled along the coastal strip and intermingled with the African inhabitants, leading to the emergence of settlements that grew into established towns.

The coastal region was dominated by foreign tribes from different countries and kingdoms- Portuguese (15th-16th centuries), Turks (16th century), Arabs (18th – 19th centuries) and finally the British colonialists in the early and mid-20th century.

Interruption with foreigners led to the emergence of the Swahili people and culture, which constitute most of the Kenya coastal societies today. The language spoken is Kiswahili, a hybrid lingua franca between the locals and foreigners; the predominant religion is Islam.

The Swahili culture and mixed heritage dominates the lifestyle of the Swahili, the Mijikenda, immigrants from other regions in Kenya and from other countries (such as Italy and Germany) who constitute the coastal population today.
Landscape And Climate

The coastal region consists of low plains with hills and woodlands, within sections such as Taita-Taveta and Tana River. Here the main activities are commercial cultivation of sugar cane and paddy rice, particularly in Tana River, and the cultivation of maize and rearing of livestock in Taita-Taveta. Along the coastline the economic activities are more diverse, apart from the cultivation of sisal, coconut, cashewnut and sugarcane.

Trade is a significant industry at the Coast as the region is home to the Kilindini harbor, the main point entry for goods destined for Kenya, Uganda, Rwanda, Central Africa and Southern Sudan. A second port has been proposed in Lamu to supplement the transit of goods and commodities to the export region.

The climate at the coast is tropical and humid, with the average temperatures being around 28°C.

The Kenya coast is the backbone of the country’s tourism industry, accounting for over 60% of foreign tourism each year. Tourists enjoy visiting the exquisite beach hotels and resorts, and indulge heartedly in watersports such as snorkeling and sport fishing in the warm waters of the Indian Ocean, while admiring the mangrove forests and diverse marine life resident in the coral reefs in Malindi, Watamu Bay and Lamu in the north and islands such as Shimoni in the south parts.

The region also has 6 terrestrial and marine parks and 11 national reserves. Among these are the Tsavo East and Tsavo West National Parks, the largest in Kenya.

For those looking to know more about the inhabitants’ history and culture the Coast is replete with prehistoric sites and monuments such as Fort Jesus in Mombasa and Gede ruins in Malindi, and festivals such as Maulid in Lamu.
Community Conserved Areas

Following a recent study conducted by Ecotourism Kenya, community conserved areas at the Coast are divided into 2 categories:

1. Community conservancies
2. Sacred forests (Makaya, plural word in Mijikenda language)

Conservancies

There are 6 community-owned conservancies at the Coast:
- 3 in Lamu (Kibodo Trust, Kipini Wildlife and Botanical Conservancy, Kuruwitu Community Marine Sanctuary),
- 2 in Taita Taveta (Lumo Wildlife Conservancy, Mwaluganje Elephant Sanctuary)
- 1 in Tana River (Ishaqbini Hirola Community Conservancy)

Sacred forests

The most prevalent community conserved areas are the makaya (sing: kaya). These are forests and woodlands in the coastal plains and hills that are deemed sacred by the Mijikenda, a community made up of 9 sub-groups: the Chonyi, Digo, Duruma, Giriama, Jibana, Kambe, Kauma Rabai and Ribe.

There are 63 makaya, 23 in Kilifi and 40 in Kwale. Together they occupy a total of about 7920 acres.

These are sacred forests and shrines whereby it is still considered taboo to cut the trees and vegetation around the makaya; this has led to their preservation of several rare or endangered plant species to the present day. The makaya are currently regarded as Important Bird Areas by Nature Kenya, with 42 of them having been recognized as national monuments by the National Museums of Kenya and 5 as national reserves by the Kenya Wildlife Service.

Campi ya Kanzi

The “Camp of the Hidden Treasure” is an eco-lodge that lies on the slopes of Chyulu Hills, facing Mount Kilimanjaro. It is situated within Kuku Group Ranch, a 280,000-acre privately-owned Maasai Reserve that contains various habitats, and a great array of wildlife and birdlife.

This pioneer of real ecotourism offers a classic luxury safari experience while caring for wilderness, wildlife and culture. Campi ya Kanzi is built from local materials and uses solar technology to supply hot water and electricity to its 6 luxury tented cottages and 2 tented suites.

Campi ya Kanzi prides itself on creating a totally relaxed atmosphere. Approaching the game will be the highlight of your safari, through classic game drives and a game walk accompanied by a professional Maasai guide and tracker.

Kilaguni Serena Safari Lodge
Located in the heart of Tsavo West National Park, with its huge population of elephants, Kilaguni Serena (est. 1962) was the first lodge to be built in a national park, and has long been a favourite of international tourists. Kilaguni stands on a ridge with magnificent views of the Chyulu Hills at the foot of Mount Kilimanjaro.

The hotel has 56 bedrooms and a terrace from which guests can view spectacular African sunsets. The waterhole is said to offer the finest viewing of savannah game in Kenya. At night, guests can listen to buffalo and elephant grazing outside their bedrooms.

Activities include game drives, excursions to the Rhino Sanctuary, Chaimu Lava Floor, Sheitani Lava, Roaring Rocks which is a volcanic hill formation with caves and rocks, and Mzima Springs with its crystal-clear water welling up from volcanic rocks and resident hippos and crocodiles.

Kilaguni became part of the Serena Hotels group in 1999.

Kizingo

Kizingo is a secluded and tranquil escape from the modern world, is situated at one end of a 12-kilometre beach in Lamu that stretches from Kizingo to the village of Shela, known as the “fashionable capital” of the Coastal region.

Kizingo is strongly committed to conservation, ecologically sound practices and a symbiotic relationship with the local community. The construction of Kizingo was assisted by the knowledge and experience of villagers and locally produced materials such as mangrove poles, star palm leaves and coconut palms were used to help the lodge blend into the landscape. Hot water and most of the electricity is produced by solar panels, whereas shower water and kitchen grey water are recycled to grow plants and trees.

Kipungani Explorer

Kipungani Explorer’s 13 spacious bandas are shaded by palm trees that line the 600-metre beachfront of Kipungani Bay, Swahili for “place of fresh air”. The lodge is accessible via boat, after a 90-minute flight from Nairobi, Mombasa or Malindi to the nearby Manda Island. Each banda is constructed entirely from local material, with a veranda facing the Indian Ocean.

The lodge offers a freshwater swimming pool, watersports such as waterskiing and kayaking in the Kipungani Channel, and visits to Lamu’s historic buildings, boat-building and mat-weaving industries.

Kipungani Explorer is actively involved in beach clean-ups, and in creating awareness on conservation of coral and marine life.

Serena Beach Hotel and Spa

Styled to resemble an ancient Swahili village, the Serena Beach Hotel & Spa is set in extensive palm-shaded grounds and centred on a sky-blue swimming pool with a thatched bar and crystal waters cascading into a tiled market square.

Within easy reach of the white sands and sparkling waters of Mombasa National Marine Park, the 164-room hotel offers an oasis of tranquillity while delivering a unique mix of high-action water sports, sybaritic sun worship, world-class safaris and vibrant nightlife.

Evening entertainment includes dancing, live bands and traditional Swahili nights with music and food. 3 restaurants, including an open-air restaurant, are set amid palm trees for picturesque dinners under the stars.

Severn Safari Camp

Severin Safari Camp is situated in Tsavo West National Park about 250 km from Mombasa and Nairobi. It is easily accessible by car or plane.

This unfenced camp provides an apt integration into nature, balanced with man through the Massai warriors who provide round-the-clock security.

Lions, buffalos, “red” elephants, leopards and countless bird species wandering around the waterhole can be viewed from the camp’s 27 suites and 8 self-catering bandas. Mzima Springs teeming with crocodiles and hippos is 10 km away from the camp. From the Poacher’s Lookout guests can enjoy the endless vastness of the National Park.

Water from the camp’s waste water treatment plant is used to maintain its 25-hectare lawn.

Severin Safari Camp supports the Kenya Wildlife Service’s initiatives through payment of its lease and the guests’ Park fees. Since 2009 it has invested in rhino conservation as a technical observatory centre, and by maintaining its feed resources program.

Subira House

Located in the heart of Lamu Old town, this 200-year-old building belonged to the Omani Busaidi family until 1970. It was later purchased in 1990, restored and extended into a small hotel with 7 double rooms.

The hotel operates a small shop for local handicraft. Organically grown indigenous vegetables and fresh seafood are used to prepare meals in its small restaurant, which accommodates a maximum of 12 diners.

Subira House endeavours to help its visitors experience the unique culture and traditions of Lamu; activities of interest include dhow sailing trips, kayaking excursions, shamba tours, long walks or donkey rides and religious and cultural festivals.

Subira House’s design reflects the local Swahili culture; the walls are preserved using beeswax and water management system is seen in the hotel’s use of traditional non-water toilets. The management is actively involved in supporting the local community in waste management, through the “Lamu Safi” project.

Severin Sea Lodge

Attention to detail is the hallmark of the Severin brand, and Severin Sea Lodge is one of the coast’s best presented properties. The lodge is located in a delightful setting on the endless white sandy beaches of Bamburi, and its accommodation is made up of makuti-roofed rondavels set in lush tropical gardens.

Guests can dine at the romantic Johari roof terrace or aboard the property’s ancient Imani dhow. The lodge has 2 swimming pools and its own diving school with PADI-registered instructors. Snorkelling and windsurfing are also available. For the less adventurous, there is a glass-bottomed boat.

Severin Sea Lodge uses solar energy for heating water throughout all the rooms, and laundry water is preheated from waste heat. The lodge contributes to the maintenance of the Bamburi nature trail by paying part of its lease, and is involved in collaborative efforts with the local community to clean Bamburi beach on a monthly basis.

Turtle Bay Beach Club

Turtle Bay Beach Club is situated next to the Watamu National Marine Park, 110 km from Mombasa International Airport and 25 km from Malindi Airport.

This hotel is the leading player in the all-inclusive holiday market, and has proved popular with both families and couples seeking quality accommodation, fun and entertainment; it has been voted by TripAdvisor as one of the best family hotels in Africa.

All 145 en-suite rooms are air-conditioned, ranging from club rooms, Lamu-style rooms to spacious ocean-front rooms with direct access to the beach. The stay includes all meals and domestic drinks; buffet meals in the main dining room, à la carte menu in the Blue Turtle Restaurant, and light meals and snacks in the Pizza Garden.

Turtle Bay offers tennis, bird-watching, water sports in the Marine Park, diving lessons in the pool, and scuba diving at the reef which is accessible by a 10-minute boat ride.

Voyager Beach Resort

Voyager Beach Resort is located along Nyali Road, 10 kilometres north of Mombasa city. Established in 1996, the resort is made up of 236 cabins and suites and is open throughout the year. The rooms are built with private balconies that provide spectacular views of the ocean and the resort’s well-manicured lawns.

Voyager Beach Resort offers conferencing facilities, family wings with connected cabins, 3 specialised restaurants, 4 bars, and Kenya’s finest hotel shopping arcade. Activities include watersports, glass-bottomed boat rides, guided walks along the reef, and romantic dhow safaris with picnics and sundowners.

The resort’s environmental policy is entrenched in its collaborative activities: the resort works with Haller Park and Mavuno, and its staff is engaged in monthly clean-ups of the beach and its surroundings.

Satao Camp

Satao Camp is located within the Tsavo East National Park. It is made up of 20 spacious en suite tents, each with an authentic antique writing desk, locally made beds, private bathroom, flushing toilet and washbasin, and a furnished patio.

Buffet lunch is served under a 200-year-old tamarind tree where guests may watch the elephants at the camp’s own watering-hole, while dinner is served in the restaurant’s lounge area.

Satao Camp’s accommodation is also suitably adapted to cater for physically challenged guests. Vehicles have been modified for wheelchair users so they can sit comfortably and enjoy the experience of a lifetime.

Diamond Beach Village

EK/CPR/106

Diamond Beach Village is situated on the beach front of Manda Island, and looks over Lamu island and Shela village. It is owned and run by artist Helen Feiler and her daughter Rachael.

It offers an alternative to the standard hotel stereotype with its rustic and chilled ambience; the only form of transport is donkey or boat, both of which are an experience in themselves.

This ultimate eco-friendly resort works very closely with the local Swahili people taking into account their culture and only using local methods and materials to create a refreshing, eco-friendly, alternative style holiday.

Medina Palms

Medina Palms is an exclusive collection of luxury villas, penthouses and apartments, next to the white beaches of the Watamu Marine Park.

The development has been designed using the latest ‘green’ technologies: biodigesters are to be installed to minimise water consumption and generate ‘free’ water for laundry, pools and irrigation for the gardens, significantly reducing the need to draw water from the mains supply.

Construction is done using local work force and sustainable building materials, therefore supporting local community and wildlife.

Medina Palms are founder members of SUSTAIN, an organisation made up of the world’s leading sustainable residential and leisure tourism developers, committed to raising awareness of environmental sustainability amongst the general public and developers worldwide.

Patterson’s Safari Camp

EK/CPR/095

Patterson’s Safari Camp is situated on a historic site where, in 1898, Col John Henry Patterson was given the task of building the Tsavo Railway Bridge. The work was hindered by a pair of notorious lions known as the Man-Eaters of Tsavo, which were later shot by Patterson.

Within the camp, each en-suite tent is situated along the Athi River, in the Tsavo East National Park, with its varied birdlife and game.

This eco-friendly camp uses solar-powered amenities and bucket showers. International and African cuisine is prepared with fresh locally-grown produce, to cater to all tastes.

Lafarge Ecosystems

For almost four decades Lafarge Ecosystems has worked on ‘Creating paradise from wasteland’ - using the Bamburi Cement plant to rehabilitate forest ecosystems at the Kenyan coast.

The plant’s north quarry gave rise to the Bamburi Forest Trails; 4 nature routes for cycling, jogging, walking and fitness.

The south quarries have been turned into Haller Park, an award-winning ecosystem of forest, grasslands and ponds that is home to giraffe, buffalo, antelope, hippo, crocodile and tortoise.

Over 2.5 million trees have been planted around the factory and in the quarries to create a beautiful environment, and help absorb carbon dioxide from the atmosphere.

Mlilo Community Tours and Safaris offers the opportunity to explore areas teeming with unique landscapes and rich biodiversity at the Kenyan coast, such as the Taita Hills and the world-renowned Tsavo National Park. It also facilitates cultural exchange through interaction with the coastal communities.

Mlilo offers tailor-made tour packages such as game drives, landscape photography, snorkeling, camping safaris, birdwatching and cave exploration. These are coordinated by highly qualified tour guides accredited by the Kenya Professional Safari Guides Association.

Mlilo won an Eco Warrior Award in 2009, for the Most Sustainable Community-Based Tourism Enterprise.

Mwaluganje Elephant Sanctuary

EK/CBO/040

Mwaluganje Elephant Sanctuary is located on the south coast of Mombasa, a region prone to human-animal conflict - elephants use the area as a migratory corridor between Tsavo National Park and Shimba Hills National Reserve, whereas farmers rely on the same land for subsistence farming.

The sanctuary was opened to reduce human-elephant conflict, ensure that community members benefit through eco-tourism activities, conserve and protect wildlife. It has established a symbiotic relationship between the farmers and the elephants; the sanctuary was created from land ceded by the farmers, who are compensated through the annual profits received from the sanctuary’s visitors.

The Kenya Safari Code

While on safari...

Keep to designated roads or tracks.
Encourage your driver to stay on roads or designated tracks when visiting national parks or reserves. Off-road driving can cause extensive damage to grass and woodland habitats.

Minimise disturbance to animals.
Wild animals become distressed when they are surrounded by several vehicles, or when vehicles come too close to them. Keep noise to a minimum and never try to attract an animal’s attention.

Stay inside your vehicle at all times.
Do not stand on the roof or hang out of the windows, and only leave your vehicle in designated areas. Remember: wild animals can be dangerous!

Keep to the speed limit.
Most wildlife areas have a speed limit of 40kph — and animals always have the right of way.

Support eco-friendly accommodation facilities.
Try to stay in lodges and camps that look after their surrounding environment and support local conservation initiatives.

Never feed wild animals.
Feeding wild animals can upset their diet and lead to an unnatural dependence upon people.

Take care not to disturb the ecological balance.
Please do not purchase, collect or remove any animal products, rocks, plants, seeds or birds’ nests from the wild, or alter the natural environment in any way.

Take all your litter with you.
Litter and garbage is very dangerous to wild animals. Keep all litter with you, and be extremely careful with cigarettes and matches, which can cause major bush fires.

The Kenya Coast Code

At the coast...

Travel with reputable operators and qualified safari guides. Insist that your tour operator and accommodation provider uses only trained and certified professional safari guides.

Respect local cultures and promote community benefits. Support projects and properties that benefit local people through employment, social development and the preservation of traditional livelihoods.

Support eco-friendly accommodation facilities. Try to stay in lodges and camps that look after their surrounding environment and support local conservation initiatives.

Protect the marine environment. Do not touch or stand on coral reefs, and never dispose of litter on the beach or in the sea.

Never buy or remove animals or shells from the sea. Avoid buying starfish, shells or any products that derive from turtles, whales or other endangered species.

Avoid buying undersized crabs and lobsters. Avoid restaurants and hotels that serve undersized crabs and lobsters, which are contributing to the rapid demise of these species.

Support traditional coastal livelihoods. Try to support designated market areas where traders are making an effort to keep their business off the beaches. Please do not give money or gifts to children, which encourages them to stay away from school.

Respect local cultures and customs. Always dress in a respectful way when visiting towns and villages — and never bathe topless on the beach.

These guidelines were developed by Friends of Conservation and Ecotourism Kenya, in conjunction with the Kenya Association of Tour Operators, Kenya Wildlife Service and the Kenya Professional Safari Guides Association.
